Arizona State University Wellness and Health Promotion Sexual Violence Prevention and Education Program (ASU SVPEP)

ASU SVPEP offers a comprehensive program in which college students are provided education for individual reflection and skill building, social marketing to reinforce positive community norms, opportunities for structured involvement to contribute to violence prevention.

Education: ASU offers online education and presentations to enhance the student experience in class, as a member of a student group or organization. Topics that are addressed through education include but are not limited to: developing healthy relationships, the continuum of violence, and definitions of consent and sexual assault.

Student Involvement: Students are invited to get involved as Peer Educators, Interns, Student Employees, and Student Volunteers. Students may assist with awareness events, staffing information tables and serving on committees and workgroups, and program development and evaluation. Students participate in training that prepares them for the level of work they will do to promote violence prevention.

Positive Community Norms: Social marketing posters, brochures, and bulletin board kits are placed in all student housing facilities to reinforce education and skills gained in class and on line. In addition, ads reflecting the same messages are placed in the student newspaper to reach a wider student audience.
